

As We Go On...

High school is just one moment. One moment, in comparison to the rest of our lives, where it seemed as though all time slowed, sound eliminated, and you just lived for the moment. You lived for the now, because it's high school and that's all you could do. But just as quickly as this slowness occurred, time sped up and progressed and this moment is almost over.

As high school comes to a close for the seniors of Hopewell, moments of reflection on the past four years are beginning to occur. These moments may contain feelings of regret or, conversely, feelings of relief. More than likely, each senior will, if not already, experience the sickening feeling of loss.

For the majority of the class, we have been surrounded everyday by the same people for eight, maybe thirteen, years. Having to acknowledge the momentous change about to occur among us may act as a catalyst for pre-nostalgia. However, let there be a reminder that after June 7, our lives will move forth, new relationships will be made, new goals determined, and milestones reached—all things that can't be done without leaving high school in the past.

In the long run, high school consumes a small amount of our lives. In perspective to one's entire life, high school is merely one instant of time. Hopefully for our graduating class, high school was a period that you can look back on and feel good about. If not, don't worry. Who you are in high school doesn't have to be who you are for the rest of your life. Whatever your plans are after graduation, those are opportunities to reinvent yourself, be the person you wanted to be these past four years.

If you're completely content with your high school days, that's fine, just don't dwell in it. Don't be one of those middle-aged people trying to live in his or her "glory days". Remember that high school is more than likely not going to be the best four years you've ever lived. Mature and progress with your life as time moves forward, but do try to look back at high school with a smile.

Take this experience and allow it to be a stepping stone for the rest of your life. Remember the lessons and connections you've made. There's a difference in doing this and being stuck in the past. Allow yourself to grow and do great things. Don't let high school inhibit you, no matter what your experience may have been.

For underclassmen, here's a question I often found myself thinking about, is it the moments that make the person, or the person that makes the moments?

For my fellow seniors, know that I am so honored to have shared this time of my life with you. Congratulations, seniors. We made it.

Love Lee

BY STEFANIE JOHNDROW

In between the speeches, reception of diplomas, and the tossing of caps into the air, while standing at graduation many of Hopewell's seniors will note something missing. We'll fill the football field as we once filled our school's classrooms, and we'll look to the stands at our loved ones, proud of our accomplishments. But still, for many of us, something will be missing.

Lee Marki was a friend to many at Hopewell High School. His passing on November 8, 2010 created a void within the class of 2013 as well as the student body. As we all searched for answers, I think we all ultimately found comfort and closure in the memory of who our friend was.

Lee's comical behavior and lighthearted laugh were free gifts to all and he was generous with friendship. Lee was many things, but I keep using the word "friend", because that word encompasses how many of us related to Lee Marki. Always making himself available to be a helping hand, deliver words of encouragement, or, as he often did, provoke a needed laugh, Lee was loved.

Two years later and many of us are departing in different directions, ready for new experiences and friendships. However, as we stand in our graduation gowns, ready to proclaim a final goodbye to our classmates, I'm sure each of us will take a moment to remember Lee. But, our duty as the friends of Lee Marki is to carry throughout our lives what he left us with—the importance of smiles, friendship, and love.
